

How to maintain academic integrity in distance learning

The whole world is adapting to the situation with COVID-19, and many schools are switching to distance learning and checking of students' homework through the Internet, online. Everyone understands how difficult it is for teachers to work in such environments. And we want to help you in these challenging times.

Due to the rapid spread of COVID-19, we are all in a very difficult situation. Teachers all over the world have hundreds and hundreds of questions and problems. One of the questions teachers have is how to follow the code of academic honesty in distance learning when students are studying from home rather than in the classroom. Students tend to ask questions - write my essay for me cheap. We want to offer you some recommendations.

In higher education, some things remain the same, even if the study format changes. For example, free format essays are often written by students on their own, without the help of a teacher. In this case, special programs will provide the instructor with a set of tools to test the student's work as well as to write an essay. Students in the same program will be given the opportunity to test the originality of an unlimited number of works.

However, many things will change. For example, for those teachers who have students writing in the classroom to prevent cheating and cheating, there will be many problems with the transition to distance learning. Another aspect, in the area of adherence to a code of academic integrity, is that teacher-student relationships are often a major component, and transition to distance learning can make it more difficult to establish these relationships.

So, how can educational institutions and educators maintain a code of academic integrity in distance learning?

- BUILDING A COMMUNITY FOR A CODE OF ACADEMIC INTEGRITY
- MAINTAIN ACADEMIC INTEGRITY IN COURSE DESIGN AND EVALUATION
- USE OF TECHNOLOGY